

Biography for Gene Venuto

Gene Venuto, Senior Partner of Priority Management Associates (PMA), is a recognized speaker, facilitator and executive coach.

Gene's unique ability to make connections and build relationships produces engaging, entertaining and informative programs. An expert in the fields of productivity and communication, Gene's techniques allow people to balance multiple tasks and commitments, improve their planning processes, enhance team collaboration, and reduce conflict. Gene's distinctive knowledge and insight led to the design of results-driven corporate universities for clients in the fields of healthcare, life sciences, financial services, education, and philanthropy. His global client base includes executives of Fortune 500 companies, entrepreneurs, and civic leaders.

Gene is a renowned speaker who is regularly requested by the Society for Human Resources Management conferences and board of directors' meetings. His keynote addresses are presented to organizations such as the American Association of Health Care Administrative Management, the International Association of Administrative Professionals, and the National Association of Tax Professionals.

Gene helped launch the philanthropic Pinnacle Group, served as chairman of the Young Executive Committee for Philadelphia's Pyramid Club and was nominated for the Delaware Valley HR Person of the Year Award. He served on the board for Devereux, a nonprofit behavioral health organization. Outside the office Gene spends time coaching youth sports.

Gene received a B.S. in Biology from Dickinson College and went on to the University of Pennsylvania where he focused on the biological basis of behavior, brain chemistry and anatomy. Prior to launching PMA in 1994, Gene applied his life sciences training in the pharmaceutical industry for Syntex Laboratories, and he worked in higher education administration.
