Samantha Bononno is Of Counsel in the Philadelphia office. She focuses her litigation practice on representing employers in a wide range of disputes including discrimination, harassment, retaliation, wage/hour, unfair labor practices, and FMLA claims. She has extensive experience in representing employers before the EEOC, DOL, NLRB and OSHA.

In addition to her litigation practice, Samantha actively counsels her clients in the areas of disability accommodations, employee leaves, labor relations, employment and non-compete agreements, staffing contracts and severance agreements.

Prior to joining Fisher Phillips, Samantha served as employment counsel for UHS of Delaware, Inc., the management company for Universal Health Services, one of the nation's largest hospital management companies. As in-house employment counsel, Samantha regularly worked with senior leadership on a broad range of issues such as hiring, discipline, termination, layoffs, investigations, leave/accommodation requests, classification and pay practices. Her in-house experience has given her a unique perspective on the challenges that employers face in policy implementation, staff management and risk reduction. Samantha's in-depth understanding of the issues employers face on a day-to-day basis, and in the healthcare industry in particular, allows her to provide targeted guidance in a timely and efficient manner, which translates to cost-savings for her clients.
